“ Words can't comfort enough when fate steps into our lives, but know that your grief is shared with many who have called you family and friend for so many years. My family, my fellow workers and of course myself, who speaks to you almost every working day, want you to know that we are thinking of you and your children at your time of deepest sorrow. It is never easy Rich, but try to remember the things about your wife that made you smile and made your life happy, cherish the children who she gave you and now allow her to live through them, if you look you will see her in their eyes as a mother's love never dies.

*Be strong my friend and know you always have people who care.
May God Bless Lori and her family.*

“ Oh no – this is horrible, horrible news. I have not seen Lori IN YEARS – we’re talking 1980s (??) – but she left an indelible mark that makes me smile EVERY TIME a memory pops in my head. Definitely full of life – and come on, we all know her well enough to say: full of sass!! Lore and I worked at Syracuse Savings Bank last millennium. Downtown, just after the ‘70s and before the internet – let me tell you: “the place” to be!! Party in the Plaza, right across the street ... we could skip the port-a-potties; used work’s bathrooms! Elbow Room, I think it was here that she lit a cig (shhhh – don’t tell her kids!), and one of her long, manicured, painted nails caught fire. Not a lick of panic, she marveled at the flame for a moment, and with amusement said, “humph – my nail’s on fire” then snapped the fire out like a match. She was always happy and made others happy! She’d have an anecdote or slant that imparted levity to just about anything. We’d vacation in Florida and holy moly that babe would BAKE herself – I’m Irish, so hell-no-way for me. She’d sun it like she was in a competition! And winning! RIP, Lori, from an old friend.

Kathy: Take care of yourself. I’m super sorry for you.

To the Family: I am so sorry for your grief. May your journey through it be brief, peppered with many good memories, and in good company. Peace.

What a very true tribute! She was a hoot! Great fun & always smiling and joking! She & my cousin had my husband and I belly laughing a lot when we’d get home to Syracuse & were able to get together.
